INTERNATIONAL STUDIES - PLAN OF STUDY

(You may change these courses without getting new signatures as long as the changes fit the criteria . It's always best to check with your advisor)

I. Disciplinary Major (Department):

You are expected to acquire your international perspective from courses in this major.

History / Political Science / Art History

(Circle one. Anthropology may also be selected, but only if choosing the Latin American Concentration)

Which two courses in your major department will count for your geographical concentration?

Note 1: In special cases, requiring the approval of the IS Committee, one of the two courses above can be taken as part of the Concentration, if it cannot fit into the major program.
Note 2: Your capstone project in your disciplinary major must have an international or comparative element related to your area of concentration. Please inform your capstone instructor that you are a participant in the International Studies Program at the beginning of the course.

II. Concentration:

East Asia / Latin America / Europe(Circle One)

Total of five courses (20 credits):
3 geographical concentration courses (12 credits):
In a discipline outside of the major dept.
1 ) $\qquad$ 2)
3) $\qquad$
4) $\qquad$ 5) $\qquad$
2 language/lit. courses at the 300 level or above ( 8 credits)
The language must be appropriate for your concentration.
Must include at least one literature course. No conversation course will meet this requirement.
2-credit courses may be taken to fill the upper level language requirement as long as a total of 8 credits are earned.
Note: A Standards-Based Measurement of Proficiency (STAMP) language assessment must be completed by the spring of senior year.

III. Study Abroad:

Briefly describe on the back of this sheet of paper your planned semester (or longer) of approved academic study abroad. If this does not have an obvious direct connection with your geographical concentration, explain why it should be accepted for your International Studies degree plan. If you have not yet begun to work with the Office of Intercultural Learning to plan your study abroad, you should do so immediately. Note: International Studies students are required to fill out a study abroad survey after their return.

Paired Major option: You may select to add an optional paired major with French, German, or Spanish (you may request a paired major with Chinese, but this requires special permission dependent on course availability). In these Paired Majors, the 300 (or higher) level language courses will be counted in the International Studies program and also in the Language and Literature major. Literature and culture courses above the 300 level can also count toward your area of concentration.
