At Southwestern, the 2019-2020 academic year began as usual with educational programming during the fall 2019 semester. During the spring 2020 semester, COVID-19 forced Southwestern to move to online courses and disband all in-person programming. As the University worked to adapt to the challenges brought on by the pandemic, the Title IX Compliance Committee continued to meet, and campus-wide programming began to pick up again in the fall of 2021. This report will highlight efforts that have continued to be made for the last three academic years.

LOOKING AHEAD TO 2022–2023

In May 2022, Southwestern hired a full-time Title IX Coordinator. The 2022-2023 academic year began with campus-wide training about mandatory reporting and education related to sexual harassment and sexual misconduct policies. These efforts will continue to reach more employees and students as the year progresses. Additional efforts will be made to review policies and case management processes throughout the year to make revisions and create new efforts for prevention programming.
