The Georgetown City Council voted unanimously to authorize the city to enact a climate change policy that would require owners of certain businesses to pay a fee for each metric ton of greenhouse gas emissions they produce. The council approved the ordinance on second reading and will consider it again on third reading at its next meeting, scheduled for Oct. 25 at 7 p.m. at city hall.

HAPPY HALLOWEEN!

The Children’s Museum Foundation and The Georgetown Community Foundation are pleased to present the third annual Fast Pitch competition, a great opportunity for people of all ages to support the arts and culture in our downtown. The competition will be held on Nov. 3 at 6 p.m. at the Williamson County Expo Center. The competition will feature five different categories: Fine Arts, Music, Dance, Film and Theatre. The competition will be judged by a panel of local and national experts who will determine the winners. The winners will receive cash prizes ranging from $100 to $3,000. The competition is open to anyone 18 years of age or older who is a resident of Williamson County or the surrounding area. The deadline for applications is Oct. 15 at 5 p.m. For more information, please visit www.fastpitchgeorgetown.com.
Continued from 1A

The resolution is another in a series of SU’s environmental protection initiatives. Since the introduction of the Environmental Studies program in 1996, the university has made a commitment to sustainability and a transition to wind power.

SU faculty urges Congress to act

Emily Northrop, Professor of Economics and Joshua Long, Associate Professor of Environmental Studies,

High School on October 19, Congressman Carter asked about the environmental issues by one of the students. He expressed his concern about climate change and sustainability. It was a very important conversation and the SU faculty was pleased with the result.

Brian Bolton is a retired psychologist living in Georgetown. He welcomes invitations to address this subject in speaking or debate.

Correction

The story about Clare Easley’s fatal accident in east of Georgetown should have reported the accident’s location as State Highway 29 east of Georgetown.

Santaland Diaries

NOVEMBER 17-DECEMBER 30

Theatre for Young Audiences

Georgetown Palace

October 20-November 28

Live on Stage

Event Rules: Anyone in line between 11 am – NOON on Saturday, October 28, will get one chance to win a pair of Santaland Diaries tickets. This is a free event and may sell out. Must be 18+ to attend.